Project title:	Disrupting cycles of gendered violence and disadvantage
Project duration, hours of engagement & delivery mode	This project will run for 10 weeks between November and February. Expected hours of engagement is approximately 28 hours/week. On-site attendance is preferred, some remote work will be possible.
Description:	Women's vulnerabilities to social exclusion and deep disadvantage are strongly correlated with their experiences of violence. Eradicating violence against women is therefore not only a human rights imperative, but a fundamental step in alleviating poverty and achieving gender equality. This project will provide insights on where, when, and how government and non-government organisations can intervene to disrupt cycles of violence in women's lives. Ultimately, this project aims to help create the conditions in which women can be free from gendered violence and have the same opportunities to realize their capabilities as men do.
Expected outcomes and deliverables:	Tasks will be negotiated with the successful candidate, and may include any of the following: • Reviewing literature • Analysing quantitative data • Preparing ethics applications • Collecting qualitative data • Contributing to academic outputs (e.g., working paper, journal article, and/or conference presentation)
Suitable for:	This project would suit students with a keen interest in the topic, and a background in the social or behavioural sciences (e.g., sociology, social policy, psychology etc).
