ABOUT THE SPEAKER

Dr Ilhong Ko is a HK Research Professor at Seoul National University Asia Center (SNUAC). She received her M.A. and PhD in Archaeology & Prehistory at the University of Sheffield and undertook her undergraduate studies at Seoul National University. Her research interests lie in human migration and exchange in ancient Korea, human practice and social reproduction/change, and North Korean archaeology. From 2009-2018, she participated in the Humanities Korea (HK) Project (funded by the National Research Foundation of Korea) at the Institute of Humanities, Seoul National University, where she collaborated actively with researchers of several other disciplines, such as philosophy, history, geography, and architecture, to explore the human condition and its permutations throughout time and space. In 2018 she joined Seoul National University Asia Center as a Research Fellow before becoming a HK Research Professor in 2020. Dr Ko currently serves as the Regional Editor for the ‘News in Northeast Asia’ section of the IIAS Newsletter, published by the International Institute for Asian Studies, Leiden. She is also Editor of Gogoohak (Journal of the Jungbu Archaeological Society).
